ERICKSEN CAMP ORE.

McAvoy and Boyle Report Rich Finds of Silver.

(Special Correspondence.)

Mammoth, May 21.—Mike McAvoy and James Boyle, old-time prospectors, who have walked over every foot of ground in the Tintic district, today arrived from a locality known as the Erickson district, which lies about twelve miles distant from here. The Tintic mining region, Messrs. McAvoy and Boyle are associated with Mr. J. N. Ferguson, manager of the Miners' Supply company, in the development of a group of claims in the Erickson camp, and the gentlemen brought in many fine samples of surface ore, mostly of silver-rich character. They report the finding of several tremendous ledges, which they easily followed for a distance of twenty miles, the peculiar feature being that four or five of the big veins run parallel, and are not more than fifty or seventy-five feet apart; and in almost the entire distance which they prospected the ledges, the appearance of low-grade surface ore was always in sight. Both McAvoy and Boyle say they never were in any section of country where a man could find such rich veins, and they invariably showing, if not at the surface, in every hole they put down from three to five feet.

They further report a man by the name of Stenstrom as owning a group of claims, sixteen in number, the Flying Dutchman, Doves and Sampson being notably good, on which a shaft has been sunk to a depth of sixty-five feet, which has a remarkably fine showing of good copper ore. Porter Rockwell of Salt Lake has a very promising copper claim in the vicinity, for which he is said to have refused an offer of $40,000, and James Boyle is working the Black Crook, on the same vein, and which contains quite a force of men, with so McAvoy and Boyle report, the best results of all.

The ore taken from the Black Crook is a very rich sulphide, running as high as 1,000 ounces of silver and 28 percent in copper. The men speak enthusiastically of the country, and believe if some company will supply funds will do some exploring work, very remarkable results will reward their labors. They think certain portions of the mine belt contain high-grade smeltering ores, and others the biggest milling proposition they ever encountered. The country is abundantly supplied with fine timber and very good water.

NEW FIND OF COPPER.

Important Discovery at the Head of Pot Creek.

(Special Correspondence.)

Vernal, May 20.—The news has just leaked out of another new and important copper discovery along the line belt at the head of Pot Creek, twenty miles north of the Biver group.

One has been known to exist in the vicinity of the new find for some time, but owing to the fact that the water that had fallen from the big ledge that cut out on the crest of the ridge, the finding of it in place was not accomplished until the present time.

The ore, which is of different character from the Biver deposits, lies immediately under a heavy cropping of red iron, the stain from which is noticeable all throughout. This work is five feet in width, with every indication of permanency.

Town Marshal John Pope, who is one of those interested in the work, is enthusiastic over the proposition, and was busy yesterday fitting out a party to push development work on the property. Many men pronounce the ore high grade.

T. H. Latimer, the well-known mining expert and smelter man, who recently visited the Biver mine in the interest of Captain De Lamar, arrived in town again last night. Mr. Latimer comes this time in the interest of the Biver people, who have secured the gentleman to superintend the development of the smelting plant that will arrive shortly.

BINGHAM BULLETIN BRIEFS.

Round-up of the Events in the "Old Reliable."

The Bingham Bulletin says: "With no drawbacks, the new Mammoth cyaniding mill will be grinding next month. Much of the machinery has already been delivered.

"The ten stamps, crusher and rolls of Red Wing mill will soon be all busy, the capacity as now operated not being sufficient. The mine is reported to be capable of turning out aside from first-class, seventy-five tons of milling ore daily.

"Gradually the speed of the Highland Road train is increasing, and from indications it will soon be dumping every half minute. The buckets are strung 24 feet apart, and at first, intervals between arrivals at terminal were over a minute. This week it is reduced to about fifty seconds. The train does its work perfectly and noiselessly, and those to whom the Bleicher system is a novelty seem never to tire of watching the industries little carriers passing to and fro, or visiting the terminal to view the interesting process of unloading and starting them back to the mine. A turning point in method of transporting Bingham ore is marked by the advent of the bucket tramway."

The Northern Light mine and nearly five cars of high-grade ore are stored in the new tunnel. The low-grade dump is also growing in size and there will be enough to start up the mill with by next month.

The Hillside people are starting another mine from the east side of the hill near the Sacramento for the purpose of intersecting the incline upon which they have been working all winter. The mine is being developed in an upraise in some of the old workings and the incline will be carried down on the vein. J. H. Hurley is engaged in putting up a hoist for the new incline and it will be advanced as fast as possible.

"During the past week, Messrs. J. C. Armstrong and George Tribe have been in town, with Mr. Moody, preparing for the development of the New Johannesburg. This is a new and important discovery, and is being developed in the old Carrie Steel workings and the Gold Dust. Mr. Armstrong is president, Mr. Tribe vice president, James P. H. Hurley and treasurer. They are all Ogden men, and the company has money in the treasury and will begin work at once. The location of the claims is very favorable to the development of a good mining property by the New Johannesburg company."

Mr. Marconi's brilliant success in telegraphing across the English channel without wires was, of course, taken advantage of by operators on the stock exchange to depress prices and to encourage the appearance of low-grade surface ore was always in sight. Piles Are Easily Cured.

Nature has provided a specific for piles. It is the active principle of the common buckeye. This principle is extracted by a special process and in combination with other remedial forms of the Pile Ointment.

This ointment cures nothing but piles, but it cures them by the active principle of the common buckeye. It makes operations needless; cures when operations fail. This is why physicians resort to it. It is a simple, safe, and effective remedy for piles, hemorrhoids, and other ailments of the rectum. It can be sent by mail.

Here is an example received at this office a day or two since from a rural village. The correspondent gave the news item in a line or two, and then ran in his personal comments. Here they are:

"The ten stamps, crusher and rolls of Red Wing mill will soon be all busy, the capacity as now operated not being sufficient. The mine is reported to be capable of turning out aside from first-class, seventy-five tons of milling ore daily.

SONS OF RICH MEN, BUT ALL HARD WORKERS

Unlike Their English Cousins, These Young Americans Are Steadily Adding to Their Inherited Wealth.

(New York Press.)

It used to be held up for the inspiration of the children of the poor that rich men's sons never amounted to anything; that they invariably ran through with their inheritance, having neither the moral force nor the mental aptitude to take care of what they had or to add to it. There are enough successful sons of successful fathers to put down one now and then to take the old dictum with several grains of salt.

The very rich American families, like the Astors, the Vanderbilts and the Goulds, are showing no disposition to let the younger generation dissipate the fortunes left to them by their acquisitions. The sons of these families are being trained from childhood to take up the family business, and by the payment of debts necessitated by a large matrimonial alliance, are cumulating wealth.

George Gould is not the bold, aggressive fighter for millions that his father was, but he is a financier of no mean ability, and is by no means a nonentity, far less a failure in the boards to whose membership he succeeded his father.

John Jacob Astor has cared less for business than for activity in other lines, but he has been far from living the life of a drone. In literature and in mechanical inventions he has made his little fortune, and his name is known in all the world. He is not in the way just closed he gave good evidence not only of a patriotic spirit, but of a high sense of duty and of a conscientiousness of the duties of an officer. It has been said that Colonel Astor is ambitious politically, but it is probable that this desire may be stifled by the consciousness of the duties of an officer in a partisan campaign.

His cousin, William Waldorf Astor, recently returned from England, where he had experience of that sort. His friends have given as one of the reasons for his self-expectation the hostility which his appearance in England has aroused. He wrote a novel that, though it wasn't a success, it was a success in its own right. He was far more capable as a representative than the average congressman, and he made a creditable record in the House of Representatives. As the proprietor of an English magazine and newspaper he has manifested an interest in current literature and affairs, and he has been a successful journalist. He is a man of high character, and he is a man of high ability.

Whether or not the threatened disinheritance of the younger Cornelius Vanderbilt has not the same effect on him, it is said to show a keen interest in "railroading," as millionaires understand the details of managing. He has been led to his being patted on the back by that excellent tutor of rich young men, "money," when he should be cut out with only $1,000,000. It is not a paltry sum, it seems likely that he will be able to make a very decent living by his own efforts, aided by the prestige of his name.

Now, his cousin, young W. K. Vanderbilt, who has just made a good start in life by marrying himself with a pretty girl, is a man of high character, and he is a man of high ability. He is a man of high character, and he is a man of high ability. He is a man of high character, and he is a man of high ability.

It looks as if Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt, Jr., were going to become as famous a housekeeper as her sister, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, who is considered the model in all New York society. Mrs. Vanderbilt is a woman of high character, and she is a woman of high ability. She is a woman of high character, and she is a woman of high ability.
